Tournament Background

The Eddie Hogan Cup Team Matches were inaugurated in 1969 by Riverside Golf & Country Club in commemoration of the vast achievements and contributions to the sport by Eddie Hogan, their long-time head golf professional who served the club from 1939 until his tragic drowning death in 1968.

These 36-hole team matches pit the best Junior golfers from the Western States and Canada against each other in a team format with the three lowest scores each day determining the team total. Medals are awarded to the top three teams as well as the top three individuals in the field.

Being selected to compete in Hogan Cup matches is an honor that has been bestowed to few individuals, and the excellence of past participants is indicative of the quality of the small, select field.

About Eddie Hogan

Eddie Hogan began his outstanding career in golf like many of Portland's up-and-coming stars: as a caddie at Waverley Country Club. The tough Irish kid proved to be a quick study in getting the best jobs. Like many Portland youngsters during this period, Hogan learned golf's fundamentals by knocking a ball around a makeshift course at Waverley's caddie yard.

Upon turning 18, Eddie joined Riverside Golf & Country Club, where he was touted as a rising star on the Portland golf scene.

His first major tournament was the 1928 Oregon Amateur. Oscar "Doc" Willing, a 4-time Oregon Amateur champion gave Hogan (pictured right) a cordial indoctrination into the world of tournament golf by defeating him, 3 & 2, in the first round.

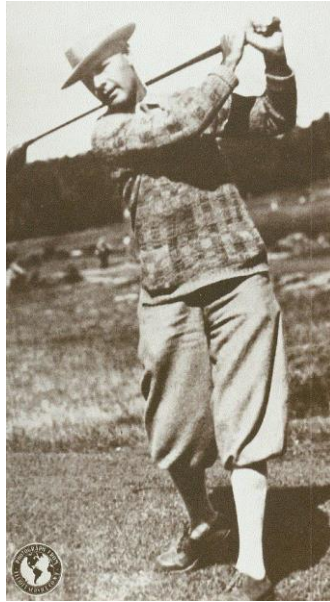

Hogan's first of five appearances in the PGA Men's Amateur Championship soon followed. In his dashing debut in 1928, he tied his nemesis Willing for medalist honors. Willing declined a playoff for the medal, giving young Hogan the honor. This was the first of many matches staged by Hogan and Willing over the next 10 years.

There was no beginner's luck to Hogan's win in the 1930 PGA Men's Amateur Championship at Vancouver Golf Club. In the semi-final matches, Hogan handily defeated Frank Dolp, then a two-time Western Amateur champion 2 and 1 with an unbeatable combination of power, exceedingly long and straight off the tee, and deadly finesse with his short irons and putter.

In the finals, Hogan faced Johnny Robbins, a former Portland City amateur. Robbins had been widely publicized as the fourth man of an immortal northwest golf foursome including "Doc" Willing, Don Moe and Chandler Egan – all successful stars on the national stage. Hogan overwhelmed Robbins with an avalanche of birdies and pars en route to an 8 & 7 victory.

At the 1932 PNGA Men's Amateur Championship, Hogan was a finalist, losing to Chandler Egan (the famed designer of Pebble Beach Golf Links pictured right). Egan's experience and hot putter defeated Eddie's quest for a second title. Hogan, who many believed at the time as the best player ever developed in the Northwest, held a three-hole advantage in his match with Egan. But the wily veteran whittled the lead to all-square and maintained pressure until the match concluded on the 34th hole.

After the 1932 PNGA Men's Amateur Championship, Hogan, for unknown reasons, didn't enter many local golf competitions after turning pro. He did reemerge in 1954 and 1956 to put himself in position to win two Oregon Open titles, but his miscues along with a late charge by eventual winner, Bruce Cudd (a member of the 1955 Walker Cup team), in the final round foiled his bid in the 1954 Oregon Open, and in 1956, hitting a "turf burner" on the next-to-last hole was his downfall as he was nosed by Gene "Bunny" Mason.

Transforming a Profession

When one thinks of golf professionals, they are naturally assumed to be both expert players and teachers of the game. Not only did Hogan have few peers in these areas, he was also one of the first area golf professionals to be involved in course construction and golf operations.

Eddie Hogan developed into a golf-industry leader after becoming a golf professional. Even today, young apprentices must learn to wear many hats while running a pro shop. Techniques perfected by Hogan during his tenure at Riverside are now commonplace.

When Eddie first entered the business, most golf shops sold a few balls, tees, some clubs and a shirt or two. Hogan built Riverside's pro shop into a busy retail operation that served as a standard for the golf business. The foresight of Hogan and other golf professionals during pre-World War II days forged what we now expect of the modern golf shop of today.

Hogan was a leader in PGA activities as well, serving as an officer in the Oregon Chapter of the Pacific Northwest Section, and as a member of several sectional committees. In keeping with a personal philosophy to back any causes that bettered the game, he hosted many tournaments and exhibitions over the years.

Sadly, Eddie Hogan met a tragic death in 1968 when he drowned during a boating accident while fishing. But his legacy lives on in the modern pro shop and his namesake junior golf event, the Eddie Hogan Cup Memorial Team Matches.

A Guardian of Junior Golf

In hopes of attracting future members, coupled with a desire to give back to the game, Hogan dedicated himself to junior golf. Not only did he make the development of junior golf a major activity at Portland's Riverside Golf & Country Club, he also fostered it at other clubs. Hogan was a leader in helping the Oregon Golf Association build its widely-recognized junior program.

Hogan's tireless efforts in spreading the gospel of junior golf is recognized annually at Riverside in the Eddie Hogan Cup Memorial Team Matches, a competition that pits the best juniors from the Western U.S. and Canada against each other.

HOGAN CUP HISTORY

In the first three years of the Hogan Cup, the competition was comprised of the top Portland metro golfers pitted against the best golfers in the State. While no results are on file for the 1st and 3rd Hogan Cup Matches, in the 2nd Annual occurrence of the event, the metro team comprised of players including (but not limited to) John Fought, Bob Harrington, Peter Jacobsen and David Jacobsen, defeated the state team 11 to 4.

The 4th Annual Hogan Cup Junior Team matches in 1972 began the format similar to what we now enjoy today with the best juniors from the Western U.S. and Canada playing against each other.

Initially, Oregon fielded two teams, one comprised of the best Metro area golfers and the other of the best State golfers. Today, as the host of this event, the Oregon Golf Association fields two teams known as Team #1 and Team #2.
